Claudia Campbell-Matland's over 30-year career in the in vitro diagnostics (IVD) industry included senior positions in Research & Development and Business Development. She is a certified Project Management Professional (PMP®) and Quality System internal auditor. Claudia has managed a variety of business-critical programs such as new product development programs from conception to commercialization, product acquisitions and remediation of Quality System/Regulatory audit deficiencies. Now working as an independent consultant, Claudia is leveraging her expertise to assist start-up and small medical device/IVD companies with project management and compliance services for new product development, compliance and other programs, and assisting universities with their research commercialization efforts. She volunteers for the NJ Chapter of the Project Management Institute as a corporate outreach speaker and leads the Chapter's new Life Science LCI (local community of interest). Claudia received her M.S. in Microbiology at Rutgers University Graduate School / University of Medicine & Dentistry Graduate School of Biomedical Sciences.
