

A Primer on Global Health

Office of Global Health
112 Patterson St. Suite 214
New Brunswick NJ 08901

About the Course

- We are in a global age. While the world economy was the first to follow this path, it has quickly spread to other areas such as health. This concept of Global Health can be summed up very simply--shared problems and shared solutions. This view stipulates that health concerns, issues and solutions must be viewed on a platform that transcends national borders. This idea has been an inspiration to countless professionals throughout the world and as a result it has turned Global Health into the next frontier for those aspiring to become active global citizens.
- Therefore, recognizing the need to stimulate our students' interest on the topic, the Office of Global Health has introduced a 2-credit elective course in collaboration with the MS/MBS program. The course is designed to provide insight on current issues pertinent to Global Health. This inter-professional course provides an in-depth and advanced understanding of global health.
- Format- It will be a combination of weekly lectures and seminars taught by our distinguished faculty; as well as participatory and interactive session as time permits.

Examples of Topics Covered

- Global Mental Health
